DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1,4-6 and 7-9 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over APA
APA in fig.9-14 a permanent-magnet motor comprising: a stator (1) having stator winding of plural phase, a rotor 10 (facing the inside of the stator, across a gap part 5), having a core (12), and a permanent magnet (14) provided to the rotor core assembly (12) made by multilayering multiple pieces of core lamination, each having plural containing holes for inserting the permanent magnets; wherein the permanent magnet is made so as to have both a convex part to the inner diameter side and a convex part to the outer diameter side in a cross section taken vertically to an axis; wherein a focus of magnetic orientation of each magnetic pole of the permanent magnet is located outside of the rotor. APA also discloses the radius of the convex part to the inner diameter side of the permanent is smaller than the radius of the convex part to the outer diameter side of the permanent magnet. Wherein, the radius of the arc of the outer diameter side of the containing hole is set to  $R < r$ ; and the thickness of the rotor core is separated by a permanent magnet and a gap (5). APA does not disclose the thickness of the rotor core and gap being  $\pm 30\%$ .

Referring to claim 8

Art Unit: 2834

APA substantially discloses the claim invention. However APA do not disclose the thickness of the rotor core and gap being  $\pm 30\%$ .

2. Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over APA as applied to claim 1,4-9 above, and further in view of Denk (EP 0223612).

As seen above in paragraph 4, APA substantially discloses the claim invention however, APA does not disclose a rotor formed by including the permanent in an outer peripheral part or the rotor core and a non- magnetic protect pipe attached around the permanent magnet.

Denk disclose in fig. (2 & 3) a permanent motor formed by including the permanent (50) in the outer peripheral part of the rotor core (22) and a nonmagnetic protect pipe (70) is attached around the permanent for the purpose of producing a sinusoidal air gap which eliminates harmonic related losses in the rotor. Therefore, it would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to modify the permanent rotor of APA and with the rotor core and nonmagnetic pipe of Denk for the purpose of eliminating losses due to harmonics. The method of manufacturing is inherent base on the structural limitations of APA and Denk.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the thickness of the rotor core and gap to reduce cogging torque, since, it has been held that where the general conditions of a claim are disclosed in the prior art, discovering the optimum or workable ranges involves only routine skill in the art. In re Aller, 105 USPQ 233.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1,4-8 and 9 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
